

Are people from Mozambique happier than people from other countires?

Rebeca Santano

Contents

Introduction	1
Methods	1
Results	1
Sub-section 1	1
Sub-section 2	3
Discussion	6
Conclusion	6

Introduction

In this paper we aim to know if people that where born in Mozambique are happier than people that were born in other countries that appear in a survey made to people working at the CISM.

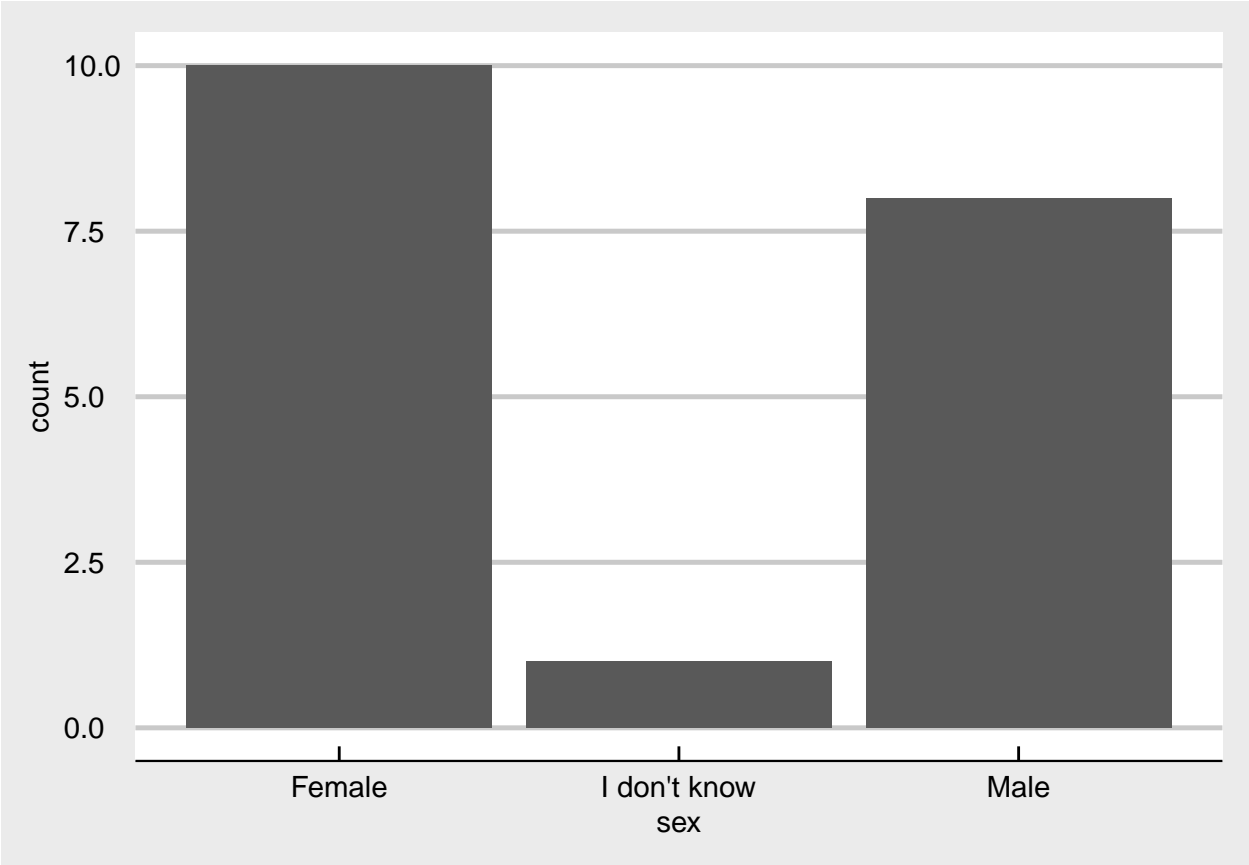

Methods

People were asked in the survey a series of questions regarding their feelings, origins and perceptions. The data obtained was analyzed using R.

Results

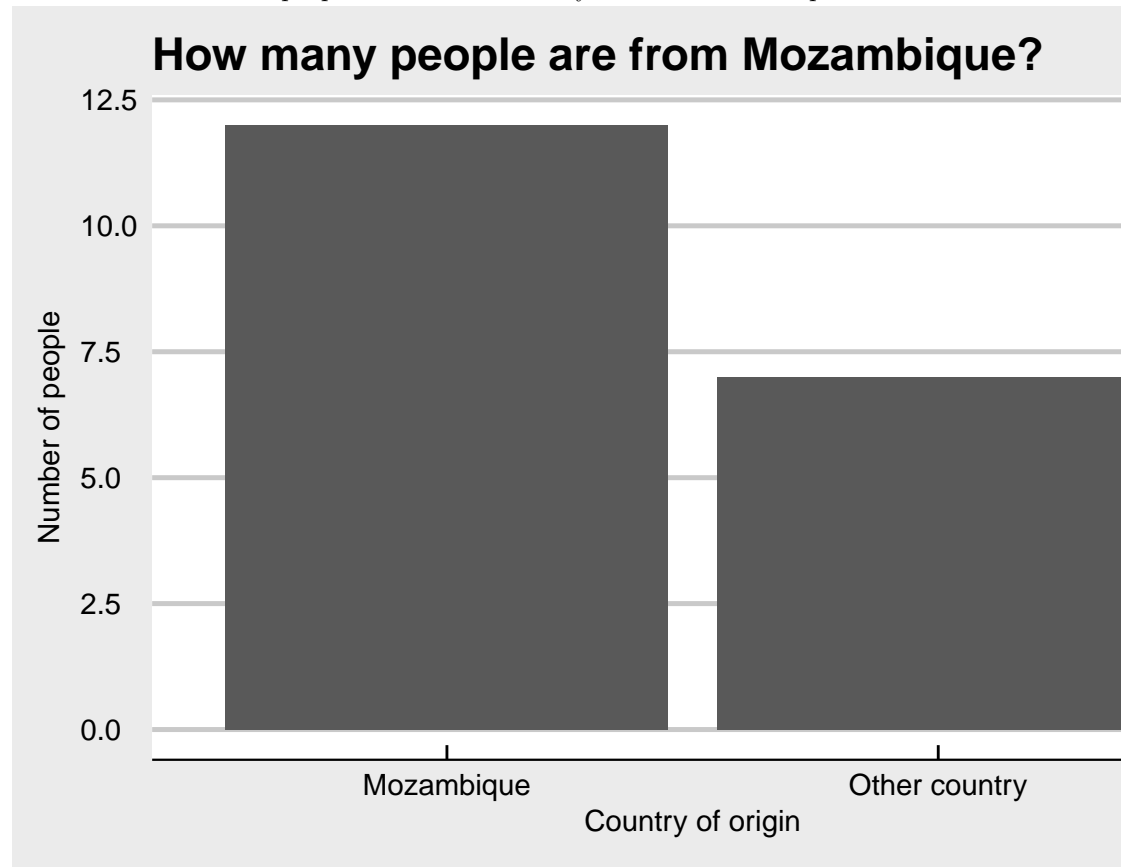

Sub-section 1

The results show the association between being from Mozambique or other country and being happy.

Sub-section 2

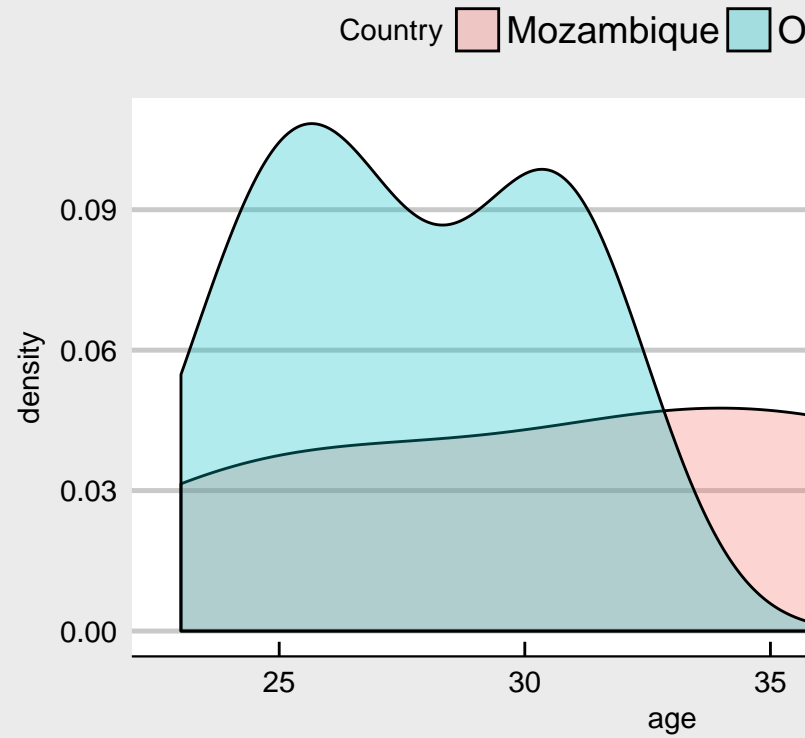

In this chart we observe that almost twice as much of people that took the survey are from Mozambique in comparison with other countries.

The following chart shows that people from Mozambique present in the survey are from a wide range of age,

How old are the people depend while people from other countries are all of them young.

If we take a look at the amount of people that wish to convert someone into a goat, we see that most of the people are so angry at someone that would like to do this.

Analyzing the above presented data all together, and addressing our research question, we can conclude that people from Mozambique are happier than the rest of the people from other countries. Also, that there doesn't seem to be a clear correlation of the level of happiness with age, while people that don't wish to convert someone into a goat are all happier.

Discussion

A larger amount of Mozambicans have a higher level of happiness when compared to other nationalities. The reason for this needs further investigation. It was interesting to observe the big amount of people that have thought about converting someone into a goat, which is a reflection of hate or anger. This fact correlates good with the level of happiness, in a way that all the people that did not have this wish had a high level of happiness.

Conclusion

Live in Mozambique and forget about goats if you wanna have a happier life, it does not matter if you are young or old.